Better understand how to identify and teach
to a student's academic style vs behavioral style

Attendees of this course will learn:

- Practical and useful strategies to know when and how to adjust your instructional strategies to reach more students;
- step-by-step methods on how to maintain your energy during challenging days such as picture day, drastic weather days, and days just before holidays;
- steps and ingredients to improve your student's long-term memory and academic success;
- how to teach your students to visualize (visualization is the most important ability a student can have for tests); and,
- external signs of students who are visualizing and how to change and store information into the visual form that is used on tests.
